El Béisbol producer Nancy Oey, completes a one-hour documentary for UNSUNG, a biography series in its second season. Ms. Oey both wrote and produced the show for Los Angeles based, A. Smith & Co. Productions.

The series profiles influential 1960s, '70s and '80s artists whose talent has been "forgotten" or neglected. Florence Ballard was one of the original founders of Motown's legendary Supremes. She achieved stardom with Diana Ross and Mary Wilson, but was later fired from the group by Motown President, Berry Gordy, Jr. Ballard's singing career never recovered. She died of coronary thrombosis at age 32.
